—I. I. N. Radiophoto

BLOOD DONOR SERVICE

The national emergency demands that human blood be collected and prepared now if the lives of our soldiers and sailors are to be saved by transfusions in time of war. To meet this urgent need, the American Red Cross has been requested by the surgeons general of the army and navy to procure two million voluntary blood donors from our civilian population within the next few months. The Red Cross has responded by organizing blood donor service.

The American Red Cross is the only organization linking officially the army and navy with the civilian population. It now offers, through a number of its chapters, including the Salem chapter, an opportunity to the American people to give of themselves in helping to save the lives of the wounded in war on land and sea.

On June 24, 1859, the French and Austrian armies fought the "bloody catastrophe of Solferino". The horrors of this battle, where the wounded lay in masses without morphine, without surgical dressings, without anesthetics and almost without any medical care, were observed by a Swiss traveler. He wrote a description of what he saw. That man was Henri Dunant, and at the end of his little book he made a plea for an international organization to alleviate the sufferings of war.

Thus Dunant conceived an idea and stimulated a movement as the result of what he had actually seen of human suffering in war, out of which was born the Red Cross.

Since the battle of Solferino the Red Cross has taken a noble part in helping to alleviate human suffering caused by catastrophes of war and of nature. As medical science has discovered new means of saving lives and lessening suffering, the Red Cross has cooperated with the medical profession in applying the new knowledge for the benefit of the victims of war and disaster. So today our young men go into war protected against disease and with the best of modern medicine and surgery to help them through. And yet there is more to be done. The treatment of traumatic shock is the urgent problem.

Nearly every person who is severely injured passes into a state of exhaustion known as traumatic shock which is a signal that the end of life is near. Their lives may be saved if this state of shock can be successfully combated. The treatment of shock by blood transfusions is now the major problem of military and naval medicine.

It is the solution of this great problem, the saving of many lives of our soldiers and sailors in time of war, in which the public, through the Red Cross, is asked to participate. We must act now, as medical science has shown the way. Human blood can be prepared into a life-saving powder, ready for immediate use in situations where transfusions were previously seldom available.

The army and navy are calling for dried plasma as one of their essential medical supplies, comparable to surgical dressings and bandages, anesthetics and indispensable drugs. The plasma is being sent to points of danger, loaded onto warships and distributed to our troops as fast as it can be prepared. A supply is to be reserved for the victims of catastrophes or disasters at home. The voluntary blood donor service is the answer to this call.

WHY YES, WHY NOT?

One type of comment produced by the reported bombing of cities in Japan by United States planes needs to be pinned down without delay.

It was an expression of sorrow because the United States had fallen to the same level of inhumanity as the countries that hoped to conquer the world with serial bombs.

Nothing would be nicer than to know that this country and its allies could survive in this war by fighting according to the strictest ideas of what is fair.

Americans always have abhorred the bombing of civilian populations. They have tried to outlaw submarine warfare. They have tried to obtain agreements not to use poison gas. In many ways, this country has tried to uphold the humanitarian ideal in war. The United States, it also should be remembered, has tried to outlaw war. It has gone so far in its efforts to make war impossible, in fact, that it is individually responsible in large part for the fact that Germany and Japan were able to get the world by the throat with so little resistance.

It is a simple case, therefore, of fighting fire with fire, not from choice but necessity. The United States is using its submarines to the utmost and is hoping to build down more in the near future; it must counter Germany's U-boat blockade with some equally effectual blocking of its own or lose the war.

The United States is going to fill the sky with the strongest and fastest bombers ever built and give every enemy city it can reach a double dose of what their country's bombers have done to civilian populations for years. This country is not going to use poison gas first, but if the enemy decides to use it this country will fight with poison gas. It is going to do what must be done to keep the aggressors from winning the war.

Perhaps there is some better way—passive resistance or hypnotism or yogi. But they are untried; the only certain way to keep from getting licked in war is to fight a better war than the other side.

Yes, and the Americans who man the bombers are going to hit some hospitals and schools, too. That seems to be the favorite bleat of the Axis propagandists—that some hospitals and schools were hit. Every American hopes fervently that the rest of the bombs may hit some war factories and munitions dumps and rail centers; but in so doing some hospitals and schools may not be missed.

Another trouble we note is that too many French officials are speaking their native tongue with a German accent!

Japs in the Philippines might have known, when thirteen American bombers appeared, that the visit meant bad luck.

With faces blackened for a simulated night attack, British Commandos line up for inspection by Prime Minister Churchill during the latter's visit to their camp. Churchill is examining the knife used by one of the men who took part in the exercises. The Commandos are trained to fight under any conditions, using whatever tactics are necessary to gain their objective.

RELAX FOR HEALTH IN WARTIME

Get Relief From Strain, Urges Clendening

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

It was some time ago before anybody blitzkrieged anybody else, that Dr. Jacobson in Chicago advocated the gospel of relaxation. His idea was that in a civilization as highly geared as ours, rest was a necessity and that it properly performed, it would conduce to longevity and health.

I always felt that there was a slight exaggeration in these statements, but I certainly feel since moving around in war time that a great many people—especially at my age—are overdoing their worrying and activities and this gospel could be used with a great deal of valuable result.

If you like to read in bed choose non fiction or a "hard" book. Force your mind to grapple with cumbersome facts, bore it into unconditional surrender to sleep.

4. Transplant your mind from fears or hates to a field which has interest without excitement (a new wardrobe, possibly).

5. Make your mind hop from one idea to another. Just as the mind loses consciousness and sleep comes, thoughts become disjointed and scattered. (Start with some happy episode in childhood, for example.)

6. To quiet the body, get rid of any pressure or pain. (Lighten weight of covers, clothes.)

7. Tepid bath and Rubdown.

8. Relax the muscles completely.

MATA HARI'S Daughter

By MAURICE DEKOBRA and LEYLA GEORGIE

CHAPTER NINETEEN

Next morning, Brinda awoke, conscious of having overslept. What had happened? She remembered Dick talking intently to Gladys and Prince Vaslav, ignoring Gladys, and lavishing attention only on her. Well, why not? Dick was engaged to Gladys. It would be a marriage for him—the impetuous naval lieutenant married to the Mountwyn millions. That must be his reason if he didn't love Gladys.

As for Vaslav, he was a rich refugee, but with a real Prince and, more important, a marvelous dancer. And he realized that she was a dancer, too—good enough to be the premiere danseuse in a ballet that would be attended by some of the best people of London.

Dancers understood each other. You talked with your body. Or better yet, you didn't talk at all, just soared on the music. Vaslav understood that. Dick didn't. He danced well, but—like he did everything else—correctly, reasonably.

Vaslav had brought them home in an utterly luxurious limousine, driven by a silent, efficient chauffeur. He had kissed her hand at the door while Dick stood by silently.

She wasn't in love with Vaslav—she would never be. But he intrigued her. And it had been fun to watch Gladys's face. Was Gladys in love with the Prince? She acted it. Yet she was going to marry Dick. What a greedy girl!—did she think she could have everything?

The housekeeper knocked at the door. "A florist's parcel, Miss Brinda." She sniffed and departed. Sitting up in bed, Brinda opened the beribboned package.

Orchids! Beautiful ones—splashed with green and gold and black. She had never seen any like them. And a tiny card—with a monarchical crest—Vaslav's—"To my lovely premiere danseuse."

Brinda held them against her skin. They complemented it exactly. That was the kind of a thing you could trust a man like Vaslav to do correctly. As to other things—well, she would find out.

Meanwhile, there was the task of convincing Sir John—of persuading him that she should not leave England as yet.

Prince Vaslav had told her the names of the patrons and patronesses of the benefit for the evacuees. It was a distinguished roster. If anything could sway her guardian, such names would.

It was a brilliant, sunny morning and war and peril seemed far away. After all, even in wartime, there were people who had to play.

she had to make the world forget its woes. That was probably her function, after all. Dick and Sir John were right. She had no business fooling with the serious side of the war. Leave that to others. She would dance. And Vaslav, who had no active interest in war either, would dance with her. In a way that was helping people—helping them to forget....

She made a leisurely toilet, lingering in the bath, pausing briefly before a pier-glass for a critical inspection of herself.... she thought of Gladys.... compared herself with her former schoolmate.... But—Gladys was the heiress to the Mountwyn millions, while she, Brinda, was only the adopted ward, of an army officer.... If Gladys wanted to, she could get Dick. But Brinda was sure that if she wanted to stop Gladys from getting Vaslav, she could!

Brinda hummed a haunting bar from a dance-melody of the previous night, executed a swift pirouette. She was glad Aunt Vick had insisted on her studying ballet. Even though that lady thoroughly disapproved of dancing as a profession, she had a theory that only those who studied ballet as children knew how to walk—a theory by which Brinda had profited more than Sir John's sedate relative knew.

Sir John had not subscribed enthusiastically to this crochet of his elderly aunt. He had some prejudice against dancers.

Brinda paused suddenly in the act of slipping into a flimsy boudoir robe. She had just remembered her guardian's anger when she had mentioned Mata Hari. That famous spy had been a dancer, too.

She wondered again why Sandy had been so disturbed at her innocent mention of the alluring spy. Then Brinda smiled; perhaps Sandy had once matched wits with Mata Hari and lost. But that wasn't probable, because Sir John hadn't been assigned to Intelligence during the previous war.

Well, dancing was more fun than spying anyway—and certainly a lot less dangerous. Poor Mata Hari—ridiculed by a French firing squad!

Her eyes encountered the pearls she had worn the night before. Better put them back in the jewel-cabinet.

Kneeling lithely, she opened the secret drawer. She gasped. There before her lay the tiny, flimsy, hastily scrawled note she had written in the house on the moor.

Somehow, it had become entangled in the clasp of the other necklace—the string of carved jade

Curiously, she eyed the other passengers. One was a German spy—but which one? How was she to know?

"All ashore!"

"All ashore!"

Sailors began casting off lines. The ship's whistle sounded a warning blast.

Brinda experienced a moment of panic. Suppose instinct had misled her? Suppose the "agreed ship" wasn't the "Vandam"? In that case, instead of helping Sir John, she would be tactfully helping the enemy.

But, even as she hesitated, the gang-plank was rolled away, and the liner—shuddering as if in anticipation of the perils outside the guarded mouth of the Southampton Port—set forth.

Possessions Still Under Vichy France Control

Return to power of the pro-Axis Pierre Laval in France focuses attention on Vichy France and its possessions, indicated in black on the map above. The islands of Miquelon and St. Pierre, off the Newfoundland coast, and the Caribbean islands of Martinique and Guadeloupe, underscored on the map, also are Vichy French possessions.

No white man to date has yet completely explored the miles of winding channels of the Everglades, which comprise 4,000,000 acres.

The electric eel, found in the rivers of Brazil, attains a length of six feet.

At the gang-plank, she hesitated. Still obeying some obscure inner instinct, she scribbled a hasty note to Dick. In it, she included the memorandum she had been unable to give him the night before—the lati-

Save Precious Vitamins and Minerals

With Modern Gas Cooking!

"Food"—says Claude R. Wickard, Secretary of Agriculture—"is a whole arsenal of weapons in this struggle for human freedom . . . the driving force behind high production by munitions workers and top-notch performance and strong morale among soldiers and sailors."

Because food is so important, adequate nutrition must be maintained in our homes in order that we may have victory.

Good nutrition can be aided materially by modern Gas cooking, which helps you save the vitamins and minerals you pay for—and get them to the table.

The health of your family counts today more than ever. See to it that you do everything possible to keep in foods the precious elements they contain when they reach your kitchen. Learn how to use modern Gas cooking to accomplish this.

In these days—when meal-planning, cooking methods and food economy are so important in keeping America strong—your Gas Companies consider it a real privilege to support our Government's National Nutrition Program.

How to Save Food—Roast meat at low temperature in your Gas oven to reduce shrinkage.

Use any remaining vegetable liquids in soups, gravies, sauces, or cold in tomato juice.

Plan one casserole dish a week to use left-overs.

How to Save Fuel—Remember, Gas is fast. It takes but a few minutes to bring an oven or a broiler up to temperature.

Plan complete oven and broiler meals, to make full use of Gas.

Place your pan on the burner before you turn on the gas.

Don't drown your vegetables; a cup of water will heat more quickly than a quart.

Members Of Book Club Hear Talk By Salem Orchardist

W. H. Matthews, orchardist, was guest speaker at the meeting of the Book club Monday afternoon in the library room. Discussing "American Rural Problems," Matthews said that one of the greatest problems today is the shortage of help, caused by the enrollment of youth in defense industries.

Mrs. Ralph D. Metzger of Canton, northeast district president of the Ohio Federation of Women's clubs, gave a short talk and installed the new officers for next year. They are

Program Presented By Methodist Group

Mothers and guests of the members of the Mary Carr Curtis society of the Methodist church were entertained at a program at the library assembly room Monday night.

The room was decorated with palms and forsythia banked and arranged to form a spring setting for the style show which featured the program.

Roll call response was introduction of the mothers and guests by the members. The altar light service was given by Mrs. Irene Matthews. Mrs. Edward Schmidt was in charge of the stewardship rite and "The Voice from the Field" was given by Mrs. Ralph Tolerton. An interesting paper on "Fashions Through the Ages" was presented by Mrs. Matthews, followed by the parade of fashions of many periods. Many of the costumes were more than 100 years old. Musical numbers by Grace Pales and Paul Evans were piano and cello duets.

The table where the buffet lunch was served later was decorated with juncos and forsythia. Mrs. David Kirby, president of the society, presided at the table.

Miss Elinor Currier was in charge of the style show.

The May 18 meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Raymond Broome, N. Ellsworth ave.

NAVY blue and brown, always an evening choice for women who take their wardrobes seriously and expensively, is now coming into the less expensive clothes brackets.

It's gowns like the one sketched here today which inspire lesser designers to emulate a good thing when they see it . . . and they see this in navy blue, in the original.

Black is the first color which leaps into the mind of a woman bent on a dark evening gown. But she should consider navy and brown; frequently they flatter a complexion more than black, in artificial light. Moreover, one gets a larger play for accessory colors with them and they are far less commonplace clothes.

THE COMMUNITY CHEST

Editor, The News:

There are three organizations in Salem that are incorporated and legally authorized to administer relief and other public charity. The three organizations are Red Cross, Salvation Army, and the Catholic Charities.

The Perry township trustees are now confined in their work to Perry township only, disbursing orange and blue stamps to the needy with which food can be purchased. There are many other organizations in Salem that administer relief, but this part of their work is not chartered by law separately, and cannot be eligible to participate in funds raised in a community chest.

The Salvation Army cannot do near the amount of work it is capable of doing, because of lack of funds. Their books show that for many weeks in the year the collections amount to less than three dollars a week, and at the end of the month they receive a share of the budget which has been less than one hundred dollars. Out of this small sum they must pay salaries, provide food, heat and light for the barracks, and all other expenses.

The barracks is in bad condition, floors and walls look worse than some barns out on the farms, and sanitary conditions are bad, and yet not a word of complaint has been heard. The amount allotted to the Salvation Army has been raised to $1,800 this year in order that the members may move to more decent living quarters.

Not a cent of money paid the Salvation Army is sent out of Salem except a very few cents which go for insurance and one or two other small items. Captain Barton, in charge of the barracks, receives a salary but little more for a week than many people in Salem get for an 8-hour day, and yet he is on duty practically seven days a week and no pay for overtime.

The Red Cross needs a little more to be said about its work. As an organization it devotes more of its work to public health and social service than to material charity. At the present time the Salem branch is doing a large amount of extra work devoted to help for families in the devastated countries of Europe.

The third agency is on the list for the first time this year. I refer to the Catholic Charities. It is an incorporated charity, organized separate from the church, and is not denominational as its name might indicate. It is governed by a board, and funds for its maintenance are raised by a drive under the direction of the board, much the same as the Salem Community Chest each year.

This charity accepts anybody regardless of race, color, or creed. It spent $3,300 last year in Salem, and the load is rather heavy, so it is on the list for $1,000 this year to help out. It has been functioning in Salem for nearly 15 years, and I have letters here from Canton, Akron, Cleveland and Youngstown, that this same charity is on the list of agencies for which public money is raised in these cities.

The Catholic Charities is also equipped to take care of children that have no homes or means of support, and this is important at this time, because the Fairmount Children's home can accept no more children from this country.

There are seven other agencies besides these three that are more familiar to the people on the list eligible to receive help from the Salem Community Chest, and a failure to support any one of them will automatically nullify all the other nine, and this fact should receive careful consideration.

Mrs. William Leahy succumbs in Vichy

VICHY, Unoccupied France, April 21.—Mrs. William D. Leahy, wife of the United States ambassador to France, died here today. She underwent a major operation last week.

Mrs. Leahy, the former Louise Tennen Harrington, had been in ill health for several years. Late in 1940, she travelled from Vichy to Lisbon to spend several weeks in Portugal at the time the couple's only son, William H. Leahy, an officer in the United States navy, was there.

She and Admiral Leahy were married on Feb. 3, 1904.

When the ambassador was recalled to Washington for "consultation," during the formation of new government of Pierre Laval last week, the United States embassy in Vichy said Admiral Leahy's departure would have to be postponed several weeks because of Mrs. Leahy's condition. She was then in a hospital.

END OF GIRLHOOD

Princess Elizabeth is 16 Today and Must Take Part in Government Youth Service

LONDON, April 21.—Princess Elizabeth's 16th birthday today marked the end of girlhood for the talented young lady who some day may be Britain's queen.

Now, her parents have decided, the time has come for her to assume the responsibilities of royalty.

The heiress-presumptive to the British throne must register under the government youth service scheme the same as any other 16-year-old.

But Elizabeth, the elder daughter of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, will not be interviewed and advised on a training plan. She is a girl guide and thus already has been fitted into the government plan for national service.

PAPER & BRASS

This is Mr. Brown

His store sells copper and brass ware, among other things.

Here are some of the copper and brass goods that Mr. Brown sold in his store last year.

This is a newspaper advertisement Mr. Brown ran LAST YEAR

Mr. Brown isn't running advertisements like that this year. There is a shortage of copper and brass, due to national defense, so Mr. Brown hasn't enough copper and brass goods to sell this year.

But Mr. Brown hasn't stopped advertising!

Mr. Brown knows that during World War I many businessmen whose stocks of goods were temporarily cut down did stop advertising.

He knows that because they stopped advertising many of those businessmen lost their customers AND DIDN'T GET THEM BACK WHEN THE WAR WAS OVER.

So Mr. Brown keeps his name before the public by keeping on advertising in the newspapers. He advertises new items—offers service on copper and brass articles. He shows his customers that he is interested in being useful to them—in giving them valuable service.

Derby Entry List Seen As Biggest Since '37; Dozen Horses Cinches To Start

By SID FEDER

NEW YORK—Alsab and Requested have packed up their toothbrushes and extra shirts and journeyed to Louisville, figuring it would be a good idea to get settled at Churchill Downs before the Kentucky Derby race starts.

And from all indications, there's going to be quite a crowd sitting in that starting gate when Col. Matt Winn's music-makers give out with "My Old Kentucky Home" May 2.

All signs point to the biggest entry list since War Admiral showed some snappy hoofing to 19 others back in 1937.

At least a dozen horses—three of them out of last Saturday's Chesapeake Stakes—already were just about a cinch to answer the starter.

And between 20 and 25 others were to get together in the Blue Grass Stake at Keeneland Thursday and the Wood Memorial at Jamaica Saturday to see who else is going to the mint julep country. From among these, there might be six or eight.

Alsab Favored

Favorites were still a dime a dozen, and much to the delight of the bookmakers, future bettors were going somewhat whacky trying to tab the good things. Off the most recent doings, Alsab, who came from far back to run second in the Chesapeake, remained in the select set, at about 4 to 1, along with William Woodward's Apache, Warren Wright's Sun Again, Col. Ed Bradley's Bless Me and Mrs. Payne Whitney's Devil Diver. Dropped out of this group, by a couple of points anyway, was Ben Whitaker's Requested, who faded in the stretch of the Chesapeake and finished third.

Sweep Swinger, the one-time plater T. D. Buhl claimed for $2,500 a year ago, moved well up as a result of his flying fourth Saturday, and was tabbed for the Churchill Downs trip. Alsab and Requested shoved off in the same railroad car.

Sun Again, Bless Me, Devil Diver and Devil Diver's stablemate, Shut Out, figure to have the blue grass among themselves Thursday. If any of the others qualify for the Derby out of that heat or the rest of the activities at Keeneland this week, they will come from among such as Buckskin, First Prize and Anticlimax, all winners during the

Reds, Cards Battle At St. Louis Today

(By Associated Press)

ST. LOUIS, April 21.—Today and tomorrow against the St. Louis Cardinals, the Cincinnati Reds can square themselves for bungling the flying start they'd agreed would be so important to pennant aspirations.

Manager Bill McKechnie's spring refrain was that a poor first month cost his Redlegs a pennant. But the end of the first week's play finds the Reds right where they were after last season's initial week—next to the last-place Phils.

Bucky Walters and Mort Cooper are today's probable pitchers.

A couple of victories here against what is widely rated as the team to beat might give a jittery Redleg outfit the shot-in-the-arm it needs.

In spite of Sunday's eight errors today's Redleg line-up was expected to preserve the same changes with rookie Bert Haas in left field, Chuck Aleno at the hot corner, and Gee Walker in right field.

Haas, a former outfielder, proved satisfactory grabbing riles Sunday, and his record of seven hits in 18 times at bat makes him the sort of fellow the Reds can't leave out of a starting lineup.

This may mean some infield duty for Mike McCormick, once an infielder, when Ival Goodman, the Reds rejuvenated rightfielder, recovers from an arm bruise in a day or so.

Utility infielder Mutt Mattick's return to the club last night helped relieve the Reds' infield shortage.

Fires Virtually "Every Day" on Normandie

Smoke drifts up from capsized Normandie.

Still on her side, the giant former French luxury liner Normandie, is the victim of another fire, the third alarming fire in as many months. The fire occurred only three days after a congressional subcommittee had labeled the liner a monument to carelessness. Fire Commissioner Patrick Walsh of New York said her had been informed that there had been fires virtually "every day" aboard the $60,000,000 liner, adding that sparks from the metal-cutting operations of workmen aboard the vessel had started a number of small fires. Damage from the most recent blaze was not serious.

Sees Turn For Better

BRISBANE, Australia, April 21.—Army Minister Francis M. Forde declared today that "the war has turned in our favor" and that the approaching Allied offensive against the Axis will be a staggering spectacle. The day for it to be unleashed is not yet here, but it is not too far off."

Forde renewed his warning that a Japanese attack against Australia may come within four weeks, adding:

"To think the Japanese will concentrate on India and not come here would be foolishness. We must be prepared for the worst." He expressed belief that the war would be long and that there would be further Allied setbacks.

Conroy said the searchers were highlighted by a visit to a tavern in Union City. "Where two outstanding band leaders were present." He declined to disclose their identities.

Agent seized much contraband, including a storm trooper's uniform, short wave radio receiving sets, guns and cameras.

Conroy said the raiders had "all leaders of German movements under scrutiny and were particularly alert for gathering celebrating Hitler's birthday." In most cases, the searchers were made in the vicinity of war plants.

HONOR" HITLER BY NEW JERSEY RAIDERS

NEWARK, N. J., April 21.—Federal Bureau of Investigation agents observed Adolf Hitler's 53rd birthday last night with a series of raids on homes and gathering places of persons of German extraction which E. E. Conroy, special agent in charge of the Newark field office, said were the largest yet conducted in New Jersey.

Conroy said the number of persons taken into custody and questioned would not be known until the agents completed their reports today.

More than 150 agents and police in municipalities up and down the state were in the raiding parties.

Conroy said the searchers were highlighted by a visit to a tavern in Union City. "Where two outstanding band leaders were present." He declined to disclose their identities.

LOS ANGELES, April 21.—It looks like the 25 pretty secretaries to city officials are going to win the battle of slacks.

They polled the city council and claim seven votes for slacks, two against and two doubtful.

The girls petitioned Walter Peterson, city clerk, for permission to wear the informal garb through the war.

Silk stockings are scarce and expensive, and skirts are being abbreviated to the point which might prove embarrassing, the girls argued. Slacks should solve the problem comfortably—and nicely.

Peterson tabled the petition "for an opportunity to judge public reaction to the request."

He got the council's reaction first.

Councilman Delamer F. McCloskey said he would introduce a resolution today giving the girls their permission.

Six other councilmen promised support. Two opposed it.

Comment from the doubtfuls:

John Baumgartner: "Too petty for consideration."

Robert Burns: "I'm too old to care."
